'I will think not only as wife, mom, actress but as a leader'

LIPA Mayor Vilma Santos-Recto acknowledges the cheers of her supporters during the flag ceremony at the Lipa City Hall Monday. Mayors and key personalities asked Santos to run against her brother-in-law, Ricky Recto, and incumbent Gov. Armando Sanchez.

LIPA CITY—ALL SHE was waiting for was a sign and, from all indications, it had come.

Lipa City Mayor Vilma Santos, the actress-turned-politician, gave the strongest signal yet that she would run for governor of Batangas province when she told thousands of supporters yesterday that she would make her decision on the matter not as a wife, or a mother, but as a leader of the people.

"I cannot say 'yes' or 'no' because I am emotional ... I don't want to issue any final decision on this day because I am too emotional right now," she told a raucous crowd of some 3,000 supporters. "Please help me pray so that God will enlighten me to make the right decision."

"Give me time. Within a week, I promise you ... this time I will think not only as a wife, a mother and as an actress. But I will

Ruling parties headed for a collision in 2010

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr. and Michael Lim Ubac

LAKAS-CMD AND KAMPI ARE HEADED on a collision course in 2010 when the two biggest parties in the country square off for political dominance after President Macapagal-Arroyo steps down from office.

"It's inevitable, Lakas and Kampi will part ways in 2010," said senatorial bet Luis "Chavit" Singson, a Lakas member, in an interview with the Inquirer. The Ilocos Sur governor even hinted that the two parties might field two different bets in the 2010 presidential election.

Senate President Manuel Villar, Senators Mar Roxas II and Panfilo Lacson and Vice President Noli de Castro have been tagged as the most likely candidates for president then.

Singson said that while the Lakas-Kampi feud had been worsening despite the President's intervention, "this has no bearing on LAKAS AND KAMPI HAVE SOMEthing in common: Both parties were designed as "alternative" rocket launchers for the presidential ambitions of Fidel Ramos and Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in 1992 and 1998, respectively.

Once off the ground, however, both parties were commandeered by professional political operators and politicians who had mastered the art of manipulative politics during the Ferdinand Marcos years, joined by seemingly new faces but who were actually chips of the old political bloc.

Such is the fate of Lakas and Kampi, according to Pastor "Boy"

More OFWs abandoning their families

By Veronica Uy, www.inquirer.net

MORE AND MORE OVERSEAS FILIPINO workers (OFWs) appear to be abandoning their families, the Center for Migrant Advocacy said yesterday as it called for legal, economic and social support for the affected families.

CMA legal counsel Henry Pajuo said a growing number of OFW families were coming to his office for advice on family abandonment.

He said that half of the cases handled by another nongovernment organization, Kaakbayan, involved family abandonment.

Lawyer Arnulfo Montano made the same observation in an earlier roundtable discussion organized by the CMA.

HK's richest lend hand to help RP's poorest

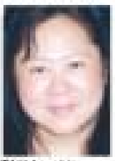

THE RICH people of Hong Kong were not only generous with their money but they also gave of themselves by visiting aid recipients in Bacolod City. Here, a young philanthropist cuddles a baby.

By Blanche S. Rivera, Inquirer Correspondent

HONG KONG—THERE WAS A QUEST FOR LIFE launched by a dying woman's wish for a coffin.

The lifeline—from the skyscrapers of Hong Kong to the slums of Negros Island and Mindanao—began 15 years ago with the meeting of two very different women.

Metro family needs ₱8,061 a month to meet basic needs

By Doris C. Dumlao

IT'S BECOMING MORE CHALLENGING for Filipinos to maintain an "economically decent" lifestyle, or stay above the poverty line.

A family of five in Metro Manila needs to earn at least ₱8,061 a month to meet its most basic needs, according to the National Statistical Coordination Board.

NSCB, the agency mandated to report on the country's official poverty statistics, said the poverty threshold for Metro Manila for 2007 had gone up from ₱7,[illegible] in 2006 and ₱7,[illegible] in 2005.

"A sole breadwinner in a five-member family residing [in Metro Manila] is expected to find an arduous task in bringing the entire family above the poverty line if he or she only earns at most ₱[illegible] per day," said NSCB officer in charge Estrella Domingo.

The daily poverty threshold in Metro Manila for this year translates to ₱[illegible], up from ₱[illegible] last year and ₱[illegible] in 2005.

Cure is all about compliance

Text & photos by Linda B. Bolido

SCIENCE MAY BE coming up with more effective and more convenient new cures every day but, as a recent meeting of experts indicated, whether or not a patient benefits from them remains primarily his/her responsibility.

In the Osteoporosis Experts Forum, "Progress in Osteoporosis Care: Reaching New Heights," in Valencia, Spain, the recurring theme was compliance, compliance, compliance.

The conference was organized by Roche Pharmaceuticals and GlaxoSmithKline.

While medical authorities touted the merits of the new medication for the bone problem, Bonviva (ibandronate), they also underscored the fact that cure eventually boiled down to the patient's willingness to follow the treatment regimen and take the correct dosage.

Osteoporosis or brittle bone is a condition that makes people more vulnerable to fractures that may not only cause disability but even death.

More at risk

Menopausal women have been found to be particularly vulnerable to this problem.

Pierre D. Delmas, a professor of medicine and rheumatology in Lyon, France, said: "Preventing fracture is key to treating post-menopausal osteoporosis." Age and a previous fracture, or fractures, increase the risk of getting another fracture.

Other risk factors include family medical history (genetics), low bone mass density and lifestyle, including smoking and excessive alcohol use.

Unfortunately, Dr. Rick Adachi, a professor in Ontario, Canada, said: "Close to 75 percent of people who have had a fracture are not treated."

And as Dr. Rene Rizzoli of Geneva, Switzerland, stressed, even if people get the necessary medication "it does not work if patients do not take it in the correct way and for the right length of time."

He cited studies that showed low numbers of patients persisting in medication. In one study after two years, only about half of the patients were still taking their medicine.

Dr. Socrates E. Papapoulos of the

EXERCISE OF THE WEEK

Letter-V arms

This exercise strengthens the chest.

Equipment:

Exercise mat and a pair of dumbbells.

Exercise technique:

1. Lie on your back with your knees bent.
2. Hold a dumbbell in each hand, directly above your shoulder joint with the palms facing the knees.
3. Slowly lower your arms to about halfway between starting position and floor.
4. Slowly bring your arms back together.
5. Do the desired number of repetitions.

Performance tips:

1. Maintain control of your chest muscles throughout the exercise. Avoid jerking or using momentum to raise or lower the weight.
2. As you lower your arms, maintain a slight tightness in the abdominal area to prevent your lower back from arching.
3. Inhale as you lower arms, exhale on the return.

Repetitions:

Do 12-15 repetitions.
